Every Child, Every Parent, Every Day
What is an easy way to improve your child’s opportunity for school success by strengthening literacy and language development while supporting the bond between parent and child? The answer is...take time to read aloud to your child from birth. “Students who read the most, read the best, achieve the most, and stay in school longer.” So, try setting aside a special few minutes before bedtime each night to share in the enjoyment of a good book. Math Fact Masters!
To support students in the area of math, we encourage math fact practice at home. When students know their facts, it supports a variety of math practices. K-2 students should practice addition and subtraction facts while students in grades 3, 4, and 5 should practice multiplication.
